

American Immigration: Views from the Inside

No subject in recent years has earned as much attention or fostered as much discussion as America's immigration crisis. Public exchanges have crystallized into a cacophonous display of sloganeering between two groups — those in favor of more compassionate border policies, and those convinced of the need to safeguard our country from security threats and job losses. This September, the Tampa Bay Great Books Fall Conversation Conference gives us the opportunity to study other critical perspectives — from the viewpoint of the immigrant entering illegally, and that of the undocumented alien trying to make a living and avoid discovery and deportation.

Fall Conversation Conference Details
